THE INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION
FOR THE STUDY OF ANTISEMITISM

The International Association for the Study of Antisemitism (IASA) is a professional association which represents scholars and intellectuals across the globe regardless of their school of thought, scientific approaches, academic discipline or ideological opinion.

Created to advance knowledge pertaining to the origins and manifestations of antisemitism throughout the world, IASA recognizes the aspirations of scholars in all academic disciplines, in all parts of the world. The Association will work to support and strengthen the free development of scholarly inquiry in cooperation with similar associations of intellectuals.

To achieve these ends, IASA supports activities to:

- Secure and develop institutional and personal contacts between scholars and intellectuals throughout the world;
- Encourage the international dissemination and exchange of information on developments in knowledge related to antisemitism and the study of antisemitism at both the empirical and conceptual levels;
- Facilitate and promote international research and training;
- Convene meetings and regularly scheduled international congresses and conferences;
- Promote publications which support the Association's research and other activities.

Membership is available for individual scholars and professionals active in the teaching or researching of antisemitism, research institutions, universities and their departments, and various associations with active scholars engaged in the subject matter of antisemitism and/or related fields.
